In reading prayers the chaplain is not at liberty to curtail the services of the church, but he must read the whole without change or mutilation, with the litany and commandments as is usual on Sunday mornings. The chaplain is not required to baptize children in the workhouse except under circumstances which would justify the administration of baptism in a private house--nor is he required to church women who may be confined in the workhouse. The children should be baptized in the parish church, and the mothers should be churched, there also. The pauper inmates should be allowed to receive the holy communion at the parish church; and where there is no workhouse chapel used exclusively for the purpose of divine worship, this rite should not be administered in the workhouse, except to the sick and disabled. But where there is...
