Excerpt: . . . 11 not subject to the review of our elected officials or of the court system. We have in place a system that demands from our Congress an open, transparent, and fair process to create rules. It demands review by the courts. It demands review by the Congress when appropriate. Federal agencies use standards that are developed in secret by outside groups, and federal employees participate in those standard-setting activities behind closed doors without giving all parties access to the information, the materials, the meetings, or the activities. Then they come back and create a standard in those private situations, and those standards are then incorporated by reference or used by the federal agencies and enforced. It avoids the openness, the transparency, the fairness and the judicial review thats available for standard setting as intended by this Congress. Its this part of...

Totally one of the better pdf I have at any time read through. It really is simplified but shocks within the 50 % from the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
